The matter came on to be heard on Saturday the 26th last. Mr Thompson in showing cause why the writ could issue claimed that if the writ countries of the could be the boundary of any the section of the countries of the c could issue at all in this kingdom, upon the showing before the Court, it must have in this case. It did not appear upon the pleading that an appeal had been just and that therefore the Court could not consider whether or not an appeal was the proper sumedy, but the respondent not having filed any unewer, the petition was the only thing before the Court, and that upon that, the Court should issue a

The Court said that the petitioner had not made out a case in its opinion, sufficiently arrong, that this writ was an exceptional remedy to be issued only when necessary, and the burden was on the petitione to show that the statute remedy of arrest was insufficient, and thought it unnecessary to hear the argument of respondent.

Defendant's counsel took exceptions to the ruling
